Dear Mary Ann,

It is Christmas Day, and I just finished your book "When Ghosts Speak." I've never thanked an author for a book before (and I read a lot of books), but I feel compelled to thank you for this one.

When I went to the library earlier this week, I was not looking for a book anything along this subject matter. I was actually looking for a book that would detail the events of the Vietnam War. Long story made short, I couldn't find anything to my liking and I wandered aimlessly about the various library stacks. I kept passing one row of books that listed "Dreams", among other things. As I have always been a vivid dreamer, I thought it might be worth my time to learn something about this subject. Just as I grabbed for a book in what I thought was the "Dream" section, the library lights began going off and on. I realized it was the librarian telling us it was time to select and check out, but all the same I thought the timing was a bit ironic, as I looked down at the book in my hand and the title was "When Ghosts Speak." I laughed to myself and thought I should accept this as a sign.

I had never heard of you and was delighted to discover your role in "The Ghost Whisperer". I often watch the show with humorous but entertaining skepticism. I grew up very religious, but in later years have developed an agnostic attitude. However, I have to admit that your book has 'explained' a few unexplainable events in my life, and I'm more inclined to back off my agnosticism and accept the fact that there may be an afterlife and a spirit world that interacts with us.

I'm happy to say, I do not think I need your services to rid myself of any unwanted spirits. If anything, I may have been honored with a blessing at some point early on in life. But thanks to you, I now realize I have connected from time to time with the spirit world and I was too puzzled to understand what had happened. Thank you for helping make some sense of a few mysteries in my life.

Happy New Year,
